

Microblading Process

We make sure that you're comfortable through every step of your eyebrow transformation. The steps we follow for a microblading appointment are listed below.

Feel free to come to your microblading appointment with your full makeup on, especially your eyebrow makeup. It can be helpful to see your made-up brows for a color reference when choosing the right ink color for your brow transformation.

Pictures - Microblading before and after pictures are a great way to see your brow transformation, so we snap a few quick pictures of your eyebrows before getting started, and then a few more after they've been microbladed.

Consultation - We both have to be on the same page in terms of eyebrow shape, and color, to give your brows the look you want, so there is heavy emphasis placed on understanding your expectations, and also helping you understand what results are possible through microblading.

Brow Shaping - Shaping eyebrows correctly is the foundation to getting perfect eyebrows. Using your facial features, and some measuring, we draw the perfectly shaped eyebrows for your face directly on your skin for you to see.

Everyone's facial structure and features differ, which requires eyebrows to be designed using the specific proportions of the face they're on. Therefore, brow shaping stencils are not used since a cookie cutter shaping process won't result in the right brow shape for each unique face.

Approval - You take some time to examine your newly shaped eyebrows. We won't move forward with anything until you are completely happy with your brow shape, and if that means some adjustments need to be made, then so be it.

Numbing - At some point you've probably wondered, "does microblading hurt?" After a topical anesthetic is applied by using a specialized technique, pain is not an issue. Some clients have actually fallen asleep during the microblading process, so yeah, we make sure you're comfortable.

Paperwork - While your skin is numbing you'll review and sign consent forms, followed by completing a brief medical history to ensure the microblading procedure won't interfere with your overall well being.

Microblading - Using a microblade, ink is implanted into your skin by making microstrokes that resemble hair to give you the brows you've always wanted.

Care Instructions - You'll be instructed on the microblading healing stages, and how to take care of your microbladed eyebrows. We supply you with a special aftercare cream to help your brows during the microblading healing process, and then schedule your touch-up appointment for 4 to 6 weeks later.

***Please note skin cells turn over more frequently on oilier skin types causing the color to fade quicker than drier skin types. For oilier skin types more frequent touch ups may be required which are not included in the original price.

